Adobe Photoshop is a powerful image-editing program. Photoshop can be used for many things from photo touch up to Photoshop scripting. Some of the features of Photoshop are listed below. Note: There are many sites that sell the professional version of Photoshop from time to time. You can find great deals on Adobe Photoshop at its official website, by using the links below. Adobe Photoshop Features Program Editing Tools There are seven main tools available in Photoshop. The tools are grouped into one on the left of the screen. The right side shows your toolbox. User interface (UI) The interface of Photoshop is not overwhelming. It's simple and easy to use. If you are a photoshop expert, you may find it's interface a little awkward. But even the newbie would find the program easy to use. There is a new feature in CS6: The Touch icon (i) on the right side of the screen. You can click on it and you will find a list of tools. Shelf The Shelf is an area where you can click, drag and drop tools. You can drag multiple tools from the Shelf. If you drop them in the Layers Palette, they will be immediately placed on the Layers palette. Layer The Layer is a tool which is used to make edits to your picture and your layers. It is placed on the bottom layer of the canvas. Layer Styles Make your pictures look more professional with Layer Styles. Layer Styles can be applied to other layers that you have created. Some of the effects that you can make to your picture are: Blur Sharpen Colorize Selective Color Inverse Drop Shadow Reflection 3D (Volume) Dissolve Gradient Map Gradient Map controls exactly what the gradient will look like. You can adjust the settings based on your liking. Gradient maps are one of the features that designers use to create high-quality images. Curves Adjusting the light and shadow of the image is easy using Curves. Crop You can crop your image. You can select an area of your picture that you want to be resized and the size will be based on the selected area. Free Transform A quick way to scale

"Dans son esprit, chacun d'entre nous ne peut que lui rendre de grands services." We were brought up to believe that man was inherently good. While I try to maintain a positive outlook in life, I'm more of a skeptical optimist. I never thought that before, but I've come to the conclusion that there is a lot of truth to the motto, "Optimism is the faith that leads to achievement." I'm tempted to go to a psychologist and get some Ritalin, but I feel like I'd prefer to see how far one can go on optimism alone. My focus has always been on the day-to-day process of living, not in the pursuit of end goals. I don't know if this makes me more realistic or lacks the true optimism that it speaks of in theory. Hey, be positive! Here's some encouragement: Quote Optimism is the attitude that things will work out OK, even though we can't be certain that they will. We are obligated to act in accordance with our moral principles, but we are not responsible for their correctness. We are moral agents, and responsible for doing good and avoiding evil, even though we cannot be certain that what we do will actually do either of these things. Unlike scientific determinism, which is untenable, moral determinism is a much more intuitive and reasonable claim. The problem is that while it may be true, it is also a paralyzing claim, since no one can morally know whether a given course of action will lead to a good outcome. We are able to know that there are moral principles that tell us we ought to do certain things, but we are not able to know whether we will do the right thing in any given situation. Despite the fact that we are morally responsible for what we do, we cannot blame ourselves if we acted rightly but things don't go as planned. It is entirely possible for us to do something wrong and it is quite possible that the universe is morally indifferent towards our actions. We are obligated to act in accordance with our moral principles, but we are not responsible for their correctness. We are moral agents, and responsible for doing good and avoiding evil, even though we cannot be certain that what we do will actually do either of these things. This resonates with my own spiritual beliefs. Things in this world that are not of
